

Photo Courtesy of Valiphotos of pexels.com

Seasonal & Weekly Fluctuations in IOP Confirmed

Swiss researchers, using an implanted intraocular telemetry sensor on glaucoma patients, confirmed previously observed seasonal variations in intraocular pressure (IOP).

They found IOP to be higher in winter than in summer, and surprisingly lower on Fridays. The difference was small, less than 10%, but statistically significant. The reason for these results is not known.

British Journal of Ophthalmology – published online February 2021