150 websites found by searching glaucoma, high intraocular pressure and high eye pressure through Google were reviewed for quality, reliability and readability. Reviewers found that the information on most websites is too complicated for the average reader to understand, and that information found on private websites was of lower quality and was less reliable than that found on institutional websites. The overall score for all websites combined was lower than preferred by the group, showing the need for better glaucoma information online.
